Portland Subchapter Two Hour Seminar and Social

Thursday,
October 27, 2005

Course Information

Who Should Attend?
Residential and Commercial Appraisers,
Brokers, Lenders, Architects and Planners.

LEED certification and Green Buildings are rapidly emerging into the mainstream of construction practices. In brief, Green Building means building smart: lower operating costs, less waste, healthier and more productive working environments.

Will the market recognize the extra value built into Green Buildings? What are the extra costs of construction?

This seminar introduces the Green Building concept from the perspective of the developers, investors, brokers, lenders and appraisers involved with this new template for building design.

Topics Presented

What is a Green Building?
The LEED certification process
Construction costs
Marketing Green Buildings
Investor's perspective
Lender's perspective
Valuation issues
